NISD's Jamie Farber Named Director of Counseling

Northwest ISD's Jamie Farber has been named the district's new director of counseling.

"I am thrilled to welcome Jamie Farber in this new role and look forward to seeing her perform in this new capacity," says Superintendent of Schools Karen G. Rue, Ed.D. "She is talented, dedicated and focused on serving our students, families, staff and communities."

Farber holds 19 years of experience in education. She is currently the lead counselor at Northwest High School and has served as a counselor for the high school since 2007. Before joining Northwest ISD, she was a counselor and teacher in Arlington ISD. As a new position to Northwest ISD, the director of counseling will direct, implement, supervise and evaluate all aspects of the district-wide counseling programs and related services.

"I am honored to fulfill the new role of director of counseling for Northwest ISD," said Jamie Farber. "I am grateful for the opportunity to work with amazing counselors throughout the district and to be able to serve all of our students, campuses and communities."

Farber holds a master's of education in counseling from the University of North Texas and a bachelor's of science in biology from the University of Texas at Arlington. Most recently, she was awarded the American School Counselor of the Year Semi-Finalist in 2014, Texas School Counselor Association Secondary/High School Counselor of the Year in 2012 and Educator of the Year for Communities in Schools of North Texas in 2012. Farber is a member of several professional organizations including the American School Counselor Association, Texas Counseling Association and the Texas School Counselor Association.

She will begin her new role as NISD's director of counseling in July.
