NISD's Susan Moore Named Principal of the Special Programs Center

At the January 13 NISD Board of Trustees meeting, the School Board approved Susan Moore to take the lead as principal of the Special Programs Center.

“Susan Moore is a dedicated employee and the ideal candidate for the Special Programs Center principal position,” said Superintendent of Schools Karen G. Rue, Ed.D. “Ms. Moore has grown from a model teacher to an exceptional administrator in Northwest ISD.”

Susan Moore is currently an assistant principal at Northwest ISD's Byron Nelson High School. She has had various roles as assistant principal and teaching since she joined the NISD family in 2005. Previously Moore was an assistant principal at Chisholm Trail Middle School when she was named Region XI Middle School Assistant Principal of the Year in 2008. Prior to a career in Northwest ISD, Moore was a lead teacher and coach at Lake Worth ISD.

“It is a privilege to lead the Special Programs Center as its new principal,” says Moore.

Susan received her Bachelor of Sciences from Missouri Western State College and her Masters of Science from Oklahoma State University. Currently, she is working on her Ed.D. in Educational Administration from Nova Southeastern University.

“I am honored to be provided an opportunity to play a key role in NISD's special programs that are vital to the development of future ready students,” Moore said.

Moore will begin her new position as principal at the Special Programs Center in January. She replaces Paula Myers who will be retiring from the district.
